

COURSE DESCRIPTIONS

- SOC 300S The 1960s and '70s 2 CREDITS
This course explores the social dynamics of a pivotal era in American history. Examining the news events, social movements, technological innovations, fashion, art, films, and music of the 1960s and '70s, students will learn what really went on back in the 1960s and '70s in terms of cultural, political, and social change. Why? And how many of these changes, three generations later, still resonate? Along with critically examining this fascinating era, we'll throw in a theme party, and even invite some parents!
- SOC 300W White Nationalist Movements in U.S. 2 CREDITS
This course looks at the multiple forms of White Nationalist social movements that have developed in the United States over the last fifty years. Emphasizing white identity, they include subgroups which adhere to white supremacy and separatism and include ideology associated with the "Christian Identity" movement and such present movements as "Rise Above," "The Patriot Front" and other believers of "The Great Replacement." No pre-requisites. Open to all majors. Must be taken concurrently with SOC 3000: White Conspiracy Online.
- SOC 300X Aging and Ageism in America 2 CREDITS
More Americans are living longer than ever previously imagined. Life expectancy in the U.S. has risen from 47-years-old in 1900 to just under 80 today; the median age of the U.S. population has jumped from 28 in 1970 to just under 40 today; and the number of Americans living to 90-or-older has tripled since 1980. In light of these developments, this May Term course explores how definitions of what it means to be older in America have been changing along with the demographics of an aging America. In addition to addressing some of the cultural, economic, and social dimensions of these changes, we'll also examine the invaluable contributions that older Americans make and how ageism often limits and undervalues many of these contributions. Finally, we'll look at what resources and services are available to assist older Americans and what more can be done to better provide for them. (Along with classroom activities; field trips and guest presentations will be a part of this May Term experience.)
- SOC 105 The Sociological Imagination 4 CREDITS
This course provides a comprehensive introduction to sociology by examining the cultural, organizational, and social forces that shape people's perceptions, actions, and opportunities. Areas of emphasis include the sociological perspective; social inequality; and social roles, groups, and institutions. (WCore: WCSBS, DE)
- SOC 205 Social Problems 4 CREDITS
Focusing on various social problems such as poverty, unemployment, crime, substance abuse, racism, discrimination, gender inequality, sexual inequality, and global inequality, this course utilizes sociological analysis to examine how social problems are defined and dealt with in the United States and other parts of the world. (WCore: WCSBS, DE)
- SOC 253 Sociology of the Family 4 CREDITS
This course explores the modern American family--examining the traditions, roles, functions, representations, changes, and controversies surrounding the social institution of the family. (WCore: WCSBS, DE)
- SOC 300 Special Topics in Sociology 1 to 4 CREDITS
The exploration of issues, problems, and innovations in sociology. Provides individual and group experience.
- SOC 313 Social Theory 4 CREDITS
This course provides a comprehensive overview of social theory - exploring, contrasting, and critiquing major sociological theorists and theoretical perspectives from their initial introduction in the 19th century through their subsequent developments in the 19th century to their continued relevance in the 21st century.
- SOC 320 Sociology of Popular Culture 4 CREDITS
This course explores the social implications of popular culture. Focusing on film, television, music, fashion, books, magazines, the Internet, and other forms of entertainment, the course critically examines how popular culture is produced, disseminated, consumed, interpreted, and experienced in the United States. (WCore: WCSBS)
- SOC 330 Sports and Society 4 CREDITS
This course explores sports as a significant cultural, political, and economic force in American society. Focusing on both established and alternative sports, the course incorporates a sociological perspective to critically examine how sports are organized, played, experienced, observed, perceived, and critiqued in the United States. (WCore: WCSBS)
- SOC 342 Sociology of the Life Course 4 CREDITS
This course examines the life course using a sociological perspective. We will examine the social processes associated with the life course, connecting individual experiences to larger social and historical processes. Life course theory will be used to highlight the following aspects of the aging process: 1) individuals are shaped by historical time and place; 2) individual lives are interconnected to others through social interaction; 3) individuals make choices for their lives and construct their own life course within the context of historical and social opportunities and constraints; 4) the timing of life events shapes an individual's immediate and future life course. During the last few weeks of class we will also explore a number of social issues central to our aging society. (WCore: WCSBS, DE)
- SOC 345 Sociology of Sexualities 4 CREDITS
This course examines sexuality from an historical, social, and interpersonal perspective. Students will study the history of sexuality research in the United States along with the major sexual revolutions. The sociological perspective will be used to understand contemporary issues around sexuality, including transgender rights, sexual orientations, modern-day sexual scripts, the sexual double standard, and the medicalization of sexuality.
- SOC 350 Gender in Society 4 CREDITS
This course examines gender from institutional, interactional, and individual level perspectives. We will cover a brief history of the women's movement and its implications within the United States. A sociological perspective will be used to understand contemporary gender issues, including the social construction of gender, the intersection of work and family, the social construction of masculinity and femininity, and gendered relationships. (WCore: DE)
- SOC 370 Social Work 4 CREDITS
This course is designed for students who are interested in learning about or pursuing a career in social work. Providing a comprehensive overview of the profession, the course will introduce students to social work theories, goals, values, ethics, skills, practices, services, and challenges.
- SOC 372 Race, Ethnicity, and Class 4 CREDITS
This course explores race, ethnicity, and social class from a sociological perspective. Many people believe that American society is "color-blind" and equal opportunities exist for all. Challenging this assumption by focusing on the continuing significance of race, ethnicity, and class in America, this course examines how historical discrimination has led to large gaps in income, wealth, educational opportunities, and health outcomes, as well as how these disparities continue to be re-created and reproduced in everyday life. (WCore: DE)
- SOC 375 Social Welfare Policy 4 CREDITS
This course examines the United States' response to the needs of the poor, disenfranchised, discriminated, and/or oppressed people of this country. Students will explore the cultural values and attitudes, as well as the economic and political dynamics, which shape social welfare policies and programs in the United States.
- SOC 390 Social Research Methods 4 CREDITS
This course provides a comprehensive introduction to research methods including research design, data collection techniques, and methods of analysis. Focusing on both quantitative and qualitative research methods, students will develop the ability to critically evaluate different types of social research, as well as to conceptualize and design their own research project.
- SOC 395 Applied Sociology 4 CREDITS
This course uses sociological theory and research methods to explore real-world social applications. Students will work with a community organization on a particular social issue with some practical outcome in mind. This course will allow students to gain a greater understanding of how sociological concepts, theory, methods, and findings are used in practice. Because this course primarily takes place in "the field," it does not have a regular meeting time. Instead, the professor works with the students to identify meeting times for faculty-student interaction, while the students participate in the project according to the project needs and their own schedules. (WCore: EWRLD)

SOC 400 Seminar in Sociology 4 CREDITS

Informal group experience for advanced students to explore explore issues, problems, and innovations in the social sciences field. Requires senior standing or consent of instructor.

SOC 401 Directed Studies 1 to 4 CREDITS

A tutorial-based course used only for student- initiated proposals for intensive individual study of topics not otherwise offered in the Sociology Program. Requires consent of instructor and school dean.

SOC 440 Internship 1 to 4 CREDITS

Offers students the opportunity to integrate class room knowledge with practical experience. Prerequisites: junior or senior standing (for transfer students, at least 15 hours completed at Westminster or permission of instructor), minimum 2.5 GPA, completion of the Career Resource Center Internship Workshop, and consent of program director and Career Center Internship Coordinator. REGISTRATION NOTE: Registration for internships is initiated through the Career Center website and is finalized upon completion of required paperwork and approvals. More info: 801-832-2590 https://westminstercollege.edu/internships

SOC 470 Senior Thesis 4 CREDITS

All sociology majors will produce a senior thesis that examines a sociological topic and/or phenomenon through original research, secondary analysis, and/or theoretical exploration. As part of their senior thesis, all sociology majors will participate in a senior thesis seminar (or a senior thesis directed study) in which they critically share their thesis work with their fellow students and/or thesis advisor. All majors signing up for the thesis must have completed SOC 390 (after having first completed MATH 150 as a prerequisite). To take the thesis, all students must have senior standing, a declared major in sociology, and consent of the instructor. (WCore: SC)