BASIC CONSTRUCTION MANAGEMENT CERTIFICATE

Westminster's Basic Project Management Training certificate program (BPMC) consists of a project-based approach where participants learn and master skills through real-world business applications while receiving mentoring from Westminster instructors who are certified project and construction management experts. Participants are mentored toward mastery of concept and execution by expert faculty-coaches while engaging in projects related to their real work environment. The program curriculum is tied to the industry recognized certificates participants need to perform at a highly proficient level. The program consists of the following areas of focus:

- BCMP Exam Preparation Course—this three-day (24 hours) workshop provides an overview of basic construction management principles and prepares participants to pass the BCMP Exam.
- BCMP Exam—this exam is a comprehensive assessment of a participant's understanding of basic construction management principles.
- BCMP Credential—this credential is awarded by the NACP to students who successfully complete Stage 1 of the ACMC program. The required pass rate for the exam is 70%.
